CELLAR

Utrecht originates from the Roman era. Under the Dom Square several remains of the Roman Fort and early middle age buildings are visible. The most important site is the sublevel in our restaurant. At the Dom Square a Roman border pile has been reconstructed and the locations of the south and east gates of the fort are marked. So check out our 'basement' and see the arches from the Lofen palace that was built in the 10-11th century. The whity stone pavement right are the fundaments of the Roman Fortress wall. "Yes, this used to be Utrechts' street level".
